The Railroad on the National Turnpike

A writer in your paper of yesterday says sold by Harrison the past six weeks at 30 and 31 cents per that we cannot tell how many attended the country meetings adverse to steam from the reports of such meetings. The reports state that the meetings were large and earnest. If any doubt that the farm ers are and that the whole country is ry-will satisfy him that the indignation and threats of many pass even proper bounds.

same back, leaving two hours in the country. But the workingman, after a day of soil, does not take such trips, nor does he feel able to spend 25 cents each for himself and wife and the same for three children over 10 years old—10 cents or more when they are under that age—for an evening's anusement. The road is used by a different class of excursionists.

This writer says if the Senators will ride out the Hempfield road they will very likely see two strong men holding a quiet horse by the head till the cars pass by, the thorse howing little signs of right. Our men must be growing timid. If a man and wife, or lady alone, or ladies, are driving or riding who would at the opportune moment supply the two strong men?

The truth is that the workingmen who use the Elm Grove Railroad for country.

field train, are of a different opinion. As to a "dummy," they say that in Philadel-phia even city teams rear and plunge and will not pass it, as they have personally seen. Farmers are generally supposed to know something about horses.

They assert that the use of steam will be a practical abandonment of the road, that no one will use it unless compelled to risk their life in doing so. They ask if this road which the public has paid for and which is necessary to them in making a livelihood, is to be surrendered either to city residents seeking pleasure or corporators seeking gains without compensation. Suppose a locomotive meets a funeral to Greenwood or the other cemeteries, one seared animal mashing vehicles, would inevitably stampede the train. Net result more funerals. The Hempfield does not run on the bed of the turnpike. Its few daily trains can be and are avoided not run on the bed of the turnpike. Its few daily trains can be and are avoided carefully. But those 15 or 20 minutes apart on the bed of the road it would be impossible to avoid.

Our very best citizens of Wheeling, bankers, merchants and even stockholders of the Elm Grove Railroad are opposed to steam. The opposition is not confined to farmers. The whole project is viewed in both city and country with amazement. That a company who have been given the in both city and country with anazement. That a company who have been given the right of way free and have made money should now ask exclusive use of the only road to be depended on in all seasons and weathers should not excite astonishment. These co-oporators individually would never think of such action. But they do not hesitate when the responsibility can be divided by creating one of those artificial persons which have "neither bodies to kick nor souls to be damned."
